3RD EDITION

Byzantium and the Crusades

Jonathan Harris, Royal Holloway, University of London, UK

Jonathan Harris's classic text chronologically surveys Byzantine history in the time of the Crusades. The book reveals the attitudes of the Byzantine ruling elites towards the Crusades and their ultimate inability to adapt to the challenges this presented. Incorporating recent scholarship, this 3rd edition has 25 further images, as well as additional maps and genealogical tables. This new edition also comes with two significant additions to the text: Appendices that translate and analyse key primary sources and secondary texts.

Conquered

The Last Children of Anglo-Saxon England

Eleanor Parker, University of Oxford, UK

What happened to the Anglo-Saxon children the Battle of Hastings left behind? From sagas and saints' lives to chronicles and romances, Conquered draws on a wide range of medieval sources to offer a fresh take on the Norman Conquest by exploring the stories of those young men and women whose lives were completely uprooted by the dramatic events of 1066. In doing so, this book shines a much-needed spotlight on the role this lost generation played in shaping the country that England was to become.

Playing the Middle Ages

Pitfalls and Potential in Modern Games

Edited by Robert Houghton, University of Winchester, UK

The Middle Ages have provided rich source material for physical and digital games from Dungeons and Dragons to Assassin's Creed. This volume addresses the many ways in which different formats and genre of games represent the period. It considers the restrictions placed on these representations by the mechanical and gameplay requirements of the medium and by audience expectations of these products and the period. It highlights innovative attempts to overcome these limitations through game design and play.

Laughter and Awkwardness in Late Medieval England

Social Discomfort in the Literature of the Middle Ages

David Watt, University of Manitoba, Canada

Examining laughter and awkwardness in late-medieval English literature, David Watt shows how the social discomfort depicted and engendered by writers as diverse as Thomas Hoccleve, Margery Kempe, and Sir Thomas Malory is a feature rather than a flaw. In exploring this, Laughter and Awkwardness in Late Medieval England reveals how and why these texts generate awkwardness and questions and in turn contemplates what it meant to live together in an awkward age.

Witnessing Stalin's Justice

The United States and the Moscow Show Trials

Kelly J. Evans, Eastern Washington University, USA & Jeanie M. Welch, University of North Carolina at Charlotte, USA

This book provides an overview and analysis of contemporary American reactions to the Moscow show trials and their impact on US-Soviet relations. Using eyewitness accounts by American diplomats and foreign correspondents for the American press as well as official US government sources, it documents the trials and highlights the wildly different reactions from liberals, radicals, intellectuals and the mainstream media. It shows how fractures of opinion ran through every level of society and divided political groups, especially between the American Communist party and other left-wing organisations.

The Nobel Family

Swedish Geniuses in Tsarist Russia

Bengt Jangfeldt

Translated by Harry D. Watson

This collective biography of the genius Nobel family reveals how their business and personal lives were fundamentally intertwined with the histories of Sweden and Russia, as well as Europe's economic and entrepreneurial development in the long 19th century. Now famous for the prize which bears their name, the Nobels were the Swedish founders of the Russian oil industry whose huge wealth was swept away during the Russian Revolution in 1917. Throughout a time of immense change in Russia and across Europe, the Nobels' story stands out as one of both brilliance and resilience, with family firmly at its heart.

Stalinism at War

The Soviet Union in World War II

Mark Edele, University of Melbourne, Australia

Stalinism at War is the definitive history of the Soviet Union in World War Two. In this book Mark Edele, a leading scholar of Soviet history, integrates the social and cultural histories of war with high-level politics and in doing so unites the political, military and economic history of the Soviet Union with broader popular histories from below. The result is an engaging, intelligent and all-encompassing account of the Soviet Union from 1937 to 1949.

The Soviet Gulag

History and Memory

Jeffrey S. Hardy, Brigham Young University, USA

This book provides a vivid account of the Gulag, the Soviet Union's infamous penal system, from 1917 through to the end of the Soviet Union and the contested memory of the Gulag that exists today. Jeffrey S. Hardy addresses both the intentions of administrators and the experience of inmates, as well as briefly discussing the main scholarly debates surrounding these issues, in the first concise history of the Gulag in the English language.

The Dark Side of Early Soviet Childhood, 1917-1941

Children's Tragedy

Boris B. Gorshkov, Kennesaw State University, USA

The Civil War and early Soviet food policies left millions of children homeless and starving in Russia in the first half of the 20th century. Child mortality rates reached 95% in certain areas, and all of these problems remained endemic throughout the 1920s and 1930s. In The Dark Side of Early Soviet Childhood, 1917-1941, Boris B. Gorshkov investigates the causes of this prolonged homelessness and starvation, the conditions faced by huge numbers of children, and the state's unsuccessful efforts to solve these horrendous issues.

Private/Public in 18th-Century Scandinavia

Edited by Sari Nauman, University of Gothenburg, Sweden & Helle Vogt, University of Copenhagen, Denmark

This open access book looks at how, in the 17th and 18th centuries, a new loanword 'private' came into the Nordic languages. It had very little to do with the way we define the word today. Still, the introduction of it contributed to an emerging discourse that clearly distinguished between the public – usually identified with the state – and its opposite and this is explored in depth in this volume. The text includes ten case studies analysed by leading Swedish and Danish researchers in the fields of history, law, archaeology, and theology.

'Economy' in European History

Words, Contexts and Change over Time

Luigi Alonzi, University of Palermo, Italy

Prompted by the 'linguistic turn' of the late 20th century, historians continue to devote a great deal of attention to the study of concepts in history. This innovative and interdisciplinary volume builds on such scholarship by providing a new history of the term 'economy' from the late middle ages to the 18th century. In doing so, this book shines much-needed light on an important challenge that many historians repeatedly face – the fact that words may change over time – and as such will be a vital resource for all scholars of early modern and European economic history.

Legacies of the Portuguese Colonial Empire

Nationalism, Popular Culture and Citizenship

Edited by Nuno Domingos, University of Lisbon, Portugal & Elsa Peralta, University of Lisbon, Portugal

Decolonization represented the end of colonial rule, but did not eradicate imperial and colonial categories and mythologies. Situated in the wider context of European colonial legacies, this book looks at the legacies of the Portuguese empire in today's Portugal. Using an interdisciplinary agenda, with contributions from experts in the fields of history, anthropology, literature, and sociology, the several case studies included in the volume look at commemorative practices that feed on imperial mythologies, old colonial and racial classifications that condition citizenship rights, and post-imperial modes of culture consumption.

The Personality of Paris

Landscape and Society in the Long-Nineteenth Century

Alan R. H. Baker, University of Cambridge, UK

What was the personality of 19th-century Paris? To answer that question, this book eschews the conventional narrative and chronological route taken by most histories of Paris. Instead, it thematically analyses the complex personality traits of Paris from the onset of the Revolution of 1789 to the beginning of the Great War. It considers the role of immigration in the making of Parisians. It examines the making of its distinctive landscape through the construction of monuments and architectural icons, its massive re-modelling by Napoléon III and Baron Haussmann, its five world exhibitions, its emphasis on food, fashion and leisure, and the ways in which Parisians sought rural release from urban pressure.

Europe's Welfare Traditions Since 1500, Volume 2

1700-2000

Thomas McStay Adams, Independent Scholar, USA

This two-volume study traces the interwoven traditions of modern welfare states in Europe over five centuries, from Portugal, France, and Italy to Britain, Belgium, and Germany. It shows that the provision of assistance to those in need has faced recognizably similar challenges from the 16th century through to the present: how to allocate aid equitably (and how to allow for social status); how to give support without undermining autonomy (the work activation dilemma); and how to balance private and public spheres of action and responsibility.

The Beginnings of Provençal Cuisine

Food, Cooking and Eating in 18th-century Provence

Barbara Santich, University of Adelaide, Australia

This book explores the development and evolution of Provençal cuisine, relying on a range of hitherto unexplored primary resources ranging from household accounts and manuscript recipes to local newspapers and gardening manuals to focus on the actuality of the 18th-century Provençal table. Taking wider historical contexts into consideration, and linking the coming-of-age of Provençal cuisine to post-Revolutionary culture, it offers a new understanding of the development and evolution of regional cuisines.

19th-Century Hungarian Political Thought and Culture

Towards Settlement with Austria, 1790-1867

Edited by Ferenc Hörcher, Hungarian Academy of Sciences, Hungary

Beginning with an overview of 19th-century Hungary in a European context, this book explores the fundamental characteristics of the country's political system and its geopolitical background at this time. The contributors reflect on the stories of some of the most influential voices, as well as their networks, impacts and legacies. Through this, the book offers novel insights into how Western political culture was perceived and adapted in a country long considered by many to belong to the European periphery.

Building a Multiethnic Military in Post-Yugoslav Bosnia and Herzegovina

Elliot Short, Independent Scholar, UK

This sophisticated study assesses Yugoslav efforts to build a multi-ethnic military during the socialist period, charts the developments of the armies that fought in the war, and offers a detailed account of the post-war international initiatives that led to the creation of the Armed Forces of Bosnia and Herzegovina. Drawing upon a wealth of primary sources, here Elliot Short provides the first analysis of the armed forces during times of peace-building in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Red Orchestra

The Story of the Berlin Underground and the Circle of Friends Who Resisted Hitler - Revised Edition

Anne Nelson

For years, the history of the anti-Nazi resistance in Germany was distorted by Cold War politics. A much-needed corrective, Red Orchestra presents the dramatic story of a circle of German citizens who opposed Hitler from the start, staying in Germany to resist Nazism and help its victims. The book illuminates this critical movement made up of academics, theatre people, and factory workers; Protestants, Catholics and Jews; around 150 Germans from all walks of life. This revised edition includes a new introduction which explores elements of the Red Orchestra's experience that resonate with our times and historiographic updates throughout the book.

Ruth Schwertfeger, University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, USA

Within the vast network of Nazi camps, Stutthof may be the least known beyond Poland. This book is the first scholarly publication in English to break the silence of Stutthof, where 120,000 people were interned and at least 65,000 perished. A Nazi Camp near Danzig offers an overview of Stutthof's history. It also explores Danzig's significance in promoting the cult of German nationalism which led to Stutthof's establishment and which shaped its subsequent development in 1942 into a Concentration Camp, with the full resources of the Nazi Reich.

Perpetration and Complicity under Nazism and Beyond

Compromised Identities?

Edited by Mary Fulbrook, Stephanie Bird & Stefanie Rauch, all University College London, UK & Bastiaan Willems, Lancaster University, UK

This book analyses perpetration and complicity under National Socialism and beyond. Contributors based in the UK, the USA, Canada, Germany, Israel and Chile reflect on self-understandings, representations and narratives of involvement in collective violence both at the time and later – a topic that remains highly relevant today. Case studies highlight patterns of complicity and involvement in perpetration, and analyse how people's stories evolve under changing circumstances and through social interaction, using varying strategies of justification, denial and rationalisation. Each chapter also considers the ways in which contemporary responses and scholarly practices may be affected by engagement with perpetrator representations.

Genocide, the Holocaust and Israel-Palestine

First-Person History in Times of Crisis

Omer Bartov, Brown University, USA

This book discusses some of the most urgent current debates over the study, commemoration, and politicization of the Holocaust through key critical perspectives. Omer Bartov adeptly assesses the tensions between Holocaust and genocide studies, whilst convincingly arguing for the importance of local history and individual testimony in grasping the nature of mass murder. He goes on to critically examine how legal discourse has served to both uncover and deny individual and national complicity. Bartov outlines how first-person histories provide a better understanding of events otherwise perceived as inexplicable and, lastly, draws on the author's own personal trajectory to consider links between the fate of Jews in World War II and the plight of Palestinians during and in the aftermath of the establishment of the state of Israel.

The Last Witches of England

A Tragedy of Sorcery and Superstition

John Callow, University of Suffolk, UK

In this book, John Callow explores the remarkable tale of the Bideford Witches and the transformation of their demise from canker to regret in public consciousness. In this, the first complete history of the case of the Bideford Witches, Callow uncovers a forgotten female history and reveals the changing attitudes towards men and women and witchcraft over time.

War, Journalism and the Shaping of the Twentieth Century

The Life and Times of Henry W. Nevinson

Angela V. John

Called 'the king of Correspondents', Henry W. Nevinson (1856-1941) captured the political zeitgeist in his newspaper journalism and books about conflicts across the globe. He provided astute, first-hand observations on events such as war between Greece and Turkey, the Siege of Ladysmith in South Africa, the aftermath of the 1905 Russian Revolution and the Gallipoli tragedy in the First World War. This book offers detailed analysis of his perspectives, whether on the Middle East, the Balkans, Russia or the United States, and shows how they can illuminate many of the conflicts which still resonate today.

Mass Observers Making Meaning

Religion, Spirituality and Atheism in Late 20th-Century Britain

James Hinton, University of Warwick, UK

Using a fascinating wealth of Mass Observation volunteer writings, Mass Observers Making

Meaning immerses us in what the big existential questions meant for people in late 20th-century Britain. The book captures the extraordinarily diverse landscape of belief and disbelief to be found in the country during the period, whilst considering the swift decline of the Christian churches since the 1960s, the growth of atheism, and the flourishing of alternative spiritualities in the process.

The Invention of the English Landscape

c. 1700-1939

Peter Borsay, Aberystwyth University, Aberystwyth & Rosemary Sweet, University of Leicester, UK

The Invention of the English Landscape examines portrayals of the English landscape to reveal how it was reconfigured as a widely enjoyed cultural and leisure resource over time. In considering the reasons for this transformation - such as the rise of consumer culture, the media, industrial and transport revolutions, Romanticism, and the Gothic revival - Peter Borsay reveals the development of a powerful bond between landscape and natural identity, against the backdrop of social and political change from the early modern period to the start of the Second World War.

The Marquess of Londonderry

Aristocracy, Power and Politics in Britain and Ireland, Revised Edition

N.C. Fleming, University of Worcester, UK

This updated edition of The Marquess of Londonderry draws extensively from private Londonderry family papers and state papers, as well as existing secondary literature, to provide an illuminating biography of Londonderry. This book has been updated with additional primary source research to reveal details about Londonderry House, Londonderry's travels and his radical right-wing beliefs as well as his infamous anti-Semitism. The Marquess of Londonderry examines Londonderry's disastrous diplomatic visits during the war, which seriously damaged his credibility at home, alongside his achievements in the Royal Air force to provide a comprehensive biography of the Marquess.

The Biopolitics of Care in Second World War Britain

Kimberly Mair, University of Lethbridge, Canada

During the crisis of the Second World War in Britain, official Air Raid Precautions made the management of daily life a moral obligation of civil defence by introducing new prescriptions for the care of homes, animals, and persons displaced through evacuation.

This book examines how the Mass-Observation movement recorded and shaped the logics of care that became central to those daily routines in homes and neighbourhoods.

War and the British

Gender and National Identity, 1939-91
 Revised Edition

Lucy Noakes, University of Essex, UK

Now with a revised introduction and foreword by Penny Summerfield, War and the British provides an incisive analysis of public and private ideas of national identity in times of war and how they were shaped by gender. By meticulously combing records held in the Mass Observation Archive, Lucy Noakes crafts a groundbreaking deconstruction of World War II memory tests, arguing that the construction of a British national identity had a built-in gender distinction. The result is a valuable addition to scholarly debates, which will be of interest to students and scholars studying the intersection of gender and war in Britain.

In the Service of Empire

Domestic Service and Mastery in Metropole and Colony

Fae Dussart, University of Sussex, UK

In the Service of Empire sheds light on the previously ignored history and impact of domestic service in empires around the world. Delving into private accounts, newspapers and official court records, Dussart provides an important and long overdue examination of the master/servant relationship. Analysing themes of power, gender, status and hierarchy within an imperial framework, this work discusses the wider implications of domestic service in empire.

Thugs and Dacoits

Volume VI: The Imperial Archives-From Discovery to the Civilisational Mission: English Writings on India

Edited by Pramod K. Nayar, University of Hyderabad, India

This volume is a part of the six volumes that throws light on the process of colonisation, its contexts, and provides a glimpse into the mind of the colonisers. It documents how the practice of thuggee was viewed by the British before: as if it symbolized everything that was wrong with the social order in India, covering the Imperial campaign against thugs and demonstrates the surveil-and-exterminate movement against thugs as an instance of imperial expansion.

The Economic History of India

Historiographical Issues and Perspectives - Essays in Honour of Professor Ranabir Chakravarti

Edited by R Mahalakshmi, Jawaharlal Nehru University, Delhi, India & Suchandra Ghosh, University of Hyderabad, India

This volume seeks to draw attention to this vast and unexplored terrain in the economic history of early India, by bringing together essays on a new and rich historiography. They cover material culture and provide insights into how early Indians lived, the activities they were engaged in, and how they organised their production activities within and outside domestic spaces. Further the volume brings new insights on hierarchy of settlement types, nature of exchange, and the significance of a nodal site in exchange networks. Maritime history as well as the understanding of trade in its varied forms and manifestations are covered.

Political Imaginaries in Twentieth-Century India

Edited by Mrinalini Sinha, University of Michigan, USA & Manu Goswami, New York University, USA

This volume reconsiders India's 20th century through a specific focus on the concepts, conjunctures and currency of its distinct political imaginaries. Spanning the divide between independence and partition, it highlights recent historical debates that have sought to move away from a nation-centred mode of political history to a broader history of politics that considers the complex contexts within which different political imaginaries emerged in 20th-century India.

Workplace Relations in Colonial Bengal

The Jute Industry and Indian Labour 1870s-1930s

Anna Sailer, Centre for Modern Indian Studies, Georg-August-University Göttingen, Germany

This book connects the history of labour movements with the transformation of workplace relations in South Asia from the late 19th century to the 1930s. Contending that labour conflicts in the Bengal jute industry must be understood against the backdrop of a radical change in the organisation of work in this period, Sailer shows how this led to a rupture in worker's relations at the workplace and beyond.

Transwar Asia

Ideology, Practices, and Institutions, 1920-1960

Edited by Reto Hofmann, University of Western Australia, Australia & Max Ward, Middlebury College, USA

This volume uses the term 'transwar' as a lens to understand the history of Asia from the 1920s to 1960s. Recent scholarship challenges the pre and post-war divide in the national histories of Asia, instead assessing change and continuity across the divide of war. Taking this reconsideration further, Transwar Asia explores the complex processes by which prewar or colonial ideologies, practices, and institutions were reconfigured during World War II and, crucially, in the two decades that followed, thus shaping the Asian Cold War and the processes of decolonization and nation state-formation.

Haruki Murakami and the Search for Self-Therapy

Stories from the Second Basement

Jonathan Dil, Keio University, Japan

Haruki Murakami has said that he started writing novels as a means of self-therapy; this book explores Murakami's fourteen published novels as an evolving therapeutic project. It starts by looking into the biographical factors behind this therapeutic project, beginning with Murakami's estrangement from his father and the death of a former girlfriend. Jonathan Dil argues that these two 'traumas' in Murakami's life are essential for understanding why he writes, before going on to successfully reason that Murakami's fiction has transcended these proximate motivations to deal with the theme of therapy on a much broader, cultural level.

The Role of the Military at the End of War, 1800-present

Edited by Beatrice de Graaf, Utrecht University, Netherlands, Frédéric Dessberg, Special Military School of Saint-Cyr, France & Thomas Vaisset, Havre Normandy university, France

What is the role of a soldier at the end of war, when either victory or defeat is inevitable? This book explores that question, examining how the military and soldiers on the ground have contributed to the process of peace-making. With case studies from 1800 to the present day, analysing subjects ranging from UN peacekeeping in Cambodia to military observers in former Yugoslavia, the post-Cold War US Army and more, Soldiers in Peace-making offers a historical overview of the role military men and women have played in the aftermath of war.

Activism Across Borders since 1870

Causes, Campaigns and Conflicts in and beyond Europe

Daniel Laqua, Northumbria University, UK

From the Occupy protests to climate change school strikes and the Black Lives Matter movement, the 21st century has been rife with activism. In this book, Daniel Laqua shows that these global efforts are not just a recent phenomenon, and that as long as there have been borders, activists have sought to cross them. Showing how individuals, groups and organisations have fostered bonds in their quest for political and social change, and exploring how national or ideological boundaries have impacted their efforts, it traces activists and movements from 1870 to the 21st century.

Militarization and the American Century

War, the United States and the World since 1941

David Fitzgerald, University College Cork, Ireland

Taking American mobilization in WWII as its departure point, this book offers a concise but comprehensive introduction to the history of militarization in the United States since 1940. Exploring the ways in which war and the preparation for war has shaped and affected the United States during 'The American Century', Fitzgerald demonstrates how militarization has shaped relations between the US and the rest of the world.

Northern Ireland, the United States and the Second World War

Simon Topping, Plymouth University, UK

Northern Ireland, The United States and the Second World War analyses the various responses to the American military presence in Northern Ireland during the Second World War, and its legacy in the years immediately thereafter. Topping offers the first monograph-length political history of United States involvement in Northern Ireland. This book provides a comprehensive overview of this largely overlooked aspect of the war, and the history of Northern Ireland more generally, and is essential for students and scholars of Irish and American history, the Second World War, and political and diplomatic history.

'Preparing for Power'

The Revolutionary Communist Party and its Curious Afterlives, 1976-2020

Jack Hepworth, University of Oxford, UK

This book employs a history of ideas approach connecting the RCP's origins in the late 1970s with its cadres' subsequent activism to the present day.

Engaging twenty-five life-history interviews with former RCP members, alongside vast primary research, the book elucidates the story of a network which has been the subject of much journalistic attention and several polemics, but little detailed research.

The Naval Government of Newfoundland in the French Wars

1793-1815

John Morrow, The University of Auckland, New Zealand

Exploring the professional and political ideas of Newfoundland naval governors during the French Wars, this book traces the evolution of the Naval Governorship and administration of the region. With a diversifying economy and growing demography amidst the French Revolutionary and Napoleonic Wars, the governors of Newfoundland faced a unique set of challenges. Morrow provides a comprehensive account of their responses to the perceived needs of those they governed - both settler and indigenous - and reveals the professional attitudes and attributes they brought to bear on their civil and military responsibilities.

A Cultural History of Comedy in Antiquity

Edited by Michael Ewans, University of Newcastle, Australia

Drawing together contributions from scholars in a wide range of fields within Classics and Drama, this volume traces the development of comedic performance and examines the different characteristics of Greek and Roman comedy. It largely centres on the surviving work of Aristophanes and Menander in Athens, and Plautus and Terence in Rome, but authors whose plays survive only in fragments are also discussed. Ancient comedic performances and plays drew on a range of forms, including satire and fantasy, and were designed to entertain and amuse their audiences while also asking them to question issues of morality, privilege and class.

A Cultural History of Comedy in the Middle Ages

Edited by Martha Bayless, University of Oregon, USA

This volume, covering the period from 1000 to 1400 CE, examines medieval comedy, from the caustic morality of principled satire to the exuberant improprieties of many wildly popular tales of sex and trickery. The analysis includes the most influential authors of the age, such as Chaucer, Boccaccio, Juan Ruiz, and Hrothswitha of Gandersheim, as well as lesser-known works and genres, such as songs of insult, nonsense-texts, satirical church paintings, topical jokes, and obscene pilgrim badges. It analyses most of the literatures of medieval Europe, including a discussion of the formal attitudes toward humor in Christian, Jewish, and Islamic traditions.

A Cultural History of Comedy in the Early Modern Age

Edited by Andrew McConnell Stott, University of Southern California, USA

Drawing together scholars with a range of expertise across the early modern period, this volume explores the rich field of early modern comedy. It argues that it was shaped by cultural transformations including the emergence of the entertainment industry, the rise of the professional comedian, commentaries on the nature of comedy, and the development of printed jestbooks. It satirized a rapidly-changing world and explored questions of gender, authority, identity, and commerce, amongst others. This volume argues that the period saw a complex and contested mix of texts, performances, and concepts, providing a deep tradition that abides to this day.

A Cultural History of Comedy in the Age of Enlightenment

Edited by Elizabeth Kraft, University of Georgia, USA

This volume highlights comedy in England with reference to developments in Europe, particularly France. Discussions emphasize the period's stage comedy and acknowledge comic expression in various forms of print media including the emerging literary form we now know as the novel. Contributions from scholars reflect a wide variety of interests in the field of 18th-century studies, and the inclusion of a generous number of illustrations throughout demonstrates that the period's visual culture was also an important part of the Enlightenment comic landscape.

A Cultural History of Comedy in the Age of Empire

Edited by Matthew Kaiser, University of California, Merced, USA

Drawing together contributions from scholars in a range of fields within 19th- and 20th-century cultural, literary, and theatre studies, this volume explores aesthetic, political, and ethical dimensions to comedy between 1800 and 1920 in the context of blackface minstrelsy, nonsense poetry, music hall and pantomime, comic almanacs and joke books, journalism, silent film, popular novels, and hygiene magazines, among other phenomena. It also provides a detailed account of contentious debates among social Darwinists, psychoanalysts, and political philosophers about the meaning and significance of comedy and laughter to human life.

A Cultural History of Democracy in Antiquity

Edited by Paul Cartledge, Clare College, University of Cambridge, UK & Carol Atack, University of Oxford, UK

This volume explores democracy in antiquity through ten chapters devoted to the notions of sovereignty; liberty and the rule of law; the “common good”; economic and social democracy; religion and the principles of political obligation; citizenship and gender; ethnicity, race, and nationalism; democratic crises, revolutions, and civil resistance; international relations; and beyond the polis.

It surveys democracy broadly as a cultural phenomenon operating in different ways across a very wide range of ancient societies, examining the experiences of those living in democratic communities and considering how ancient practices of democracy differ from our own.

A Cultural History of Democracy in the Medieval Age

Edited by David Napolitano, University of Cambridge, UK & Kenneth Pennington, The Catholic University of America, USA

This volume explores democracy in the Middle Ages through ten chapters devoted to the notions of sovereignty; liberty and the rule of law; the common good; economic and social democracy; religion and the principles of political obligation; citizenship and gender; ethnicity, race, and nationalism; democratic crises, revolutions, and civil resistance; international relations; and the scalability of democracy beyond the limits of a single city. It argues that the Middle Ages deserve to be included in the history of democracy and highlights a variety of ideas, practices, procedures, and institutions that played a significant role in that history.

A Cultural History of the Home in Antiquity

Edited by Joanne Berry & Andrew Wallace-Hadrill, University of Cambridge, UK

To attempt a history of 'the home' in antiquity means bringing together two separate, if closely related, fields of study. On the one hand, study of the family, both in the legal frameworks that define it as institution and the literary representations of it in daily life; on the other, archaeological study of the domestic setting, within which such relationships are played out.

Ranging across a period of over a millennium, this first volume in the illustrated Cultural History of Home collection looks at the home as a force of integration: of the worlds of family and of the outsider in hospitality; of the worlds of leisure and work; of the worlds of public and private life; of the world of practical structures and furnishings and the world of religion.

A Cultural History of the Home in the Medieval Age

Edited by Katherine L. French

The medieval age was one of enormous change in the way people lived in their houses. Medieval people could call a grand castle, a humble thatched hut, or anything in between home, but houses were more than physical spaces. They changed according to technological developments, climatic needs, geological limitations and economic resources. They were also moral units that were themselves symbolic, economic, gendered, and social.

This volume in the illustrated Cultural History of the Home collection argues that through a house and its uses, occupants created, sustained, and understood their relationship to each other and their society.

A Cultural History of the Home in the Renaissance

Edited by Amanda Flather, University of Essex, UK

This volume in the illustrated Cultural History of Home collection addresses the relationship between people and their homes in Christian areas of Western Europe in the Renaissance, traced from the late fourteenth century to around 1650. The two centuries after 1450 were characterised by a cluster of interrelated forces that led to significant changes in the material, social, cultural, economic and political landscape. The essays in the volume vary in their geographical focus of study and disciplinary approach but taken together they try to uncover the impact of these changes on how people used, thought and felt about their homes in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

A Cultural History of the Home in the Age of Enlightenment

Edited by Clive Edwards, Loughborough University, UK

During the period of the Enlightenment, the word 'home' could refer to a specific and defined physical living space, the location of domestic life, and a concept related to ideas of roots, origins, and retreat. In this volume in the illustrated Cultural History of Home collection, enlightenment homes are examined in terms of signification and meaning; the persons who inhabited them; the physical buildings and their furniture and furnishings; the work undertaken within them; the differing roles of men and women; the nature of hospitality, and the important role of religion in the home. Taken together they give a valuable overview of the manners, customs, and operation of the Enlightenment home, and the significant changes that occurred in the Enlightenment period.

A Cultural History of the Home in the Age of Empire

Edited by Jane Hamlett

During the 19th century the home, as both a cultural construct and a set of lived practices, became more powerful in the Western world than ever before. The West saw an unprecedented period of imperial expansion, industrialisation and commercialization that transformed both where and how people made their homes. Scientific advances and increasing mass production also changed homes materially, bringing in domestic technologies and new goods.

This volume in the illustrated Cultural History of Home collection explores how homes and homemaking were imagined and practiced across the globe in the 19th century.

Life Unseen

A Story of Blindness

Selina Mills

In this fascinating historical adventure, Broadcaster and author Selina Mills takes us on a journey through the history of blindness in Western Culture. Inspired by her own experience of losing her sight, Life Unseen takes us through a personal historical quest through the lives, stories and achievements of blind people - as well as those sighted people who sought to patronize, demonize and fix them. From the blind poet Homer, through the myths of early medieval culture to the scientific and medical discoveries of modern times, the story of blindness turns out to be a story of our whole culture.

Feelings and Work in Modern History

Emotional Labour and Emotions about Labour

Edited by Agnes Arnold-Forster & Alison Moulds

This edited collection interrogates the troubled relationship between emotion and work to shed light on the feelings and meaning of both paid and unpaid labour from the late nineteenth to the twenty-first century. Critiquing the concept of 'emotional labour', and the history of how work has made us feel, Feelings and Work in Modern History explores the changing values we have ascribed to our labour, examines the methods deployed by workplaces to manage or 'administrate' our emotions, and traces feelings through 19th, 20th and 21st century workplaces in Europe, Asia and South America.

Mothers, Criminal Insanity and the Asylum in Victorian England

Cure, Redemption and Rehabilitation

Alison C. Pedley, Independent Scholar, UK

Explores the experiences, treatments and regimes undergone by women who had been designated insane from 1850 to 1900 in three notorious institutions: Bethlem, Fisherton House and Broadmoor. Focusing particularly on patients who had murdered, or attempted to murder, their own children, it shows how insanity gave the Victorians an acceptable explanation for these dreadful crimes and how admission to a dedicated asylum was seen as the safest and most humane solution for the 'madwoman' and society as a whole.

Probation and the Policing of the Private Sphere in Britain, 1907-1962

Louise Settle, University of Helsinki, Finland

In 1907 the Probation of Offenders Act introduced a system which allowed offenders to be rehabilitated at home under supervision, rather than being sent to prison. This book explores how the probation system was used to regulate the private and emotional lives of offenders in Britain during this period, enriches our understanding of the role of the state in policing, monitoring and promoting the well-being of its citizens, and explores the nuances of probation's dual purpose as a form of social control and as protection for the most vulnerable in society.

Debating Contemporary Approaches to the History of Science

Edited by Lukas M. Verburgt, Netherlands Institute for Advanced Study, Netherlands

Debating New Approaches to the History of Science offers a unique overview of the history of science and explores how it has evolved and where it might progress to next. Edited by Lukas M. Verburgt, and written by a team of established and early-career academics, each chapter is followed by a critical commentary from another key scholar in the field to provide students with an overview of the field and encourage critical thinking.

Modern Historiography in the Making

The German Sense of the Past, 1700-1900

Kasper Risbjerg Eskildsen, Roskilde University, Denmark

At the end of the 19th century, German historical scholarship had grown to great prominence. Academics around the world imitated their German colleagues. Intellectuals described historical scholarship as a foundation of the modern worldview. To many, the modern age was an 'age of history'. This book investigates how German historical scholarship acquired this status across the 18th and 19th centuries and offers a radical revision of the history of scholarship by focusing on practices of research and education.

A Cultural History of Comedy

Edited by Andrew McConnell Stott, University of Southern California, USA and Eric Weitz, Trinity College Dublin, Ireland

How has our expression, use and reception of comedy developed from antiquity to the present day? What role has it occupied in Western culture, and what can it tell us about how society has changed?

In a work that spans 2,500 years, these ambitious questions are addressed by 55 experts, each contributing their overview of a theme applied to a period in history. The volumes describe various manifestations of comedy, its use in religion, theatre and literature, and its historical and philosophical significance.

Themes (and chapter titles) are: Form; Theory; Praxis; Identities; The Body; Politics and Power; Laughter; and Ethics.

A Cultural History of Democracy

Edited by Eugenio Biagini, University of Cambridge, UK

How has the concept of democracy been understood, manifested, reimagined and represented through the ages? In a work that spans 2,500 years these fundamental questions are addressed by 66 experts, each contributing their overview of a theme applied to a period in history. With the help of a broad range of case materials they illustrate the physical, social and cultural contexts of democracy in Western culture from antiquity to the present.

Themes (and chapter titles) are: Sovereignty; Liberty and the Rule of Law; The 'Common Good'; Economic and Social Democracy; Religion and the Principles of Political Obligation; Citizenship and Gender; Ethnicity, Race and Nationalism; Democratic Crises, Revolutions and Civil Resistance; International Relations; and Beyond the Polis.

A Cultural History of the Home

Edited by Amanda Flather, University of Essex, UK

A comprehensive survey of the domestic space from ancient times to the present. Spanning 2800 years, the volumes explore how different cultures and societies have established, developed and used the home. It reveals a great deal about how people have lived day-to-day in a range of regions and epochs by providing a historical focus on the location in which they will have spent much of their time: the domestic space.
